Keith P. Mankin, MD is currently president of All Peer Consulting and Education, a creative and educational consultant service in Dallas, TX and Co-Producer of the PeerSpectrum Medical Podcast. Among other services, he specializes in commercial and creative writing, as well as coaching individuals in organizing, designing and completing their own literary projects.

Born in Pittsburgh, PA and raised in Boston, MA, Dr. Mankin earned a humanities degree from Harvard University, and then a medical degree from University of Pittsburgh. After postgraduate medical training in pediatric orthopaedic surgery at Harvard Medical School, Dr. Mankin worked for twenty years as a developmental orthopaedist in Boston, MA and Raleigh, NC, until his retirement from medical practice in 2016. His medical and scientific interests were far-ranging, from scoliosis and its genetic basis to the biochemical response of growth cartilage to stress.

Dr. Mankin is also staff writer for Theater Jones Arts Journal and is the author of eleven novels (three currently in print) and four non-fiction books, including co-author/editor of the memoir of his father the late Henry J. Mankin, MD.

When not writing or teaching, Dr. Mankin spends his time rooting for Boston sports teams in absentia, while living in Dallas, TX with his wife, Julia Fielding, MD, and his aged pug dog.
